Cell extras

Grip, grab, power, or protect your phone with these

Is your cell phone properly accessorized? We're not talking rhinestones or ring tones but extras that make it easier to use your phone. To give you a sneak peek at some of the latest fun add-ons, our reporter walked the floor of the huge Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas. One hot accessory on display was the Powermat (www.powermat.us.com), which will be available later in the year. You simply plopp your phone on a receiver on the plugged-in mat and it charges wirelessly. Another cool product to look for is the iStik (www.goistik.com). With this magnetic device you can stick your iPod Nano anywhere on your clothing or a bag. While we didn't test those new toys, here are some nice extras we did take a look at.

short leash

Mobigrip, $7.95 to $9.95
Called a "safety belt" for high-tech toys, this gizmo gives you a little insurance when you're chatting on your cell phone, jamming to your MP3 player, or waiting to point and shoot your camera. Stick the Mobigrip to the back of the device and loop the bungee cord around your finger. A Mobigrip could come in handy if you're kind of a klutz—you'll have no more worries about dropping or losing your expensive toy. It's available in red, green, blue, silver, and other colors.

magic shell

Speck CandyShell, $34.95
The durable coating on the outside protects your iPhone 3G from nicks and scrapes, and the soft, rubbery interior provides cushioning against bumps and drops. The CandyShell also comes with a cleaning cloth and a removable screen-protector film. It's available in color combos like Lemondrop (Liquorice, Key Lime, Jazzy), Cranberry White Truffle, and Watermelon Gumball. Yum!
